This issue will be different. We have a guest columnist, Emery McClendon. We have added a page for his thoughts, because they are too important to edit. Please welcome Emery to The American!

WAKE UP, WALKAWAY, AND DON'T LOOK BACK

In these times of uncertainty and disarray in America and the Black community, it's time for us to take a serious look at where we want our country to go. We all have been lied to and misled for too long. It's time for our leaders and the people of our community to seek the truth.

We need to step back from time to time and look at our worldview and define our purpose in life. We need to ask God to shake us up, and wake us up, then follow the path that He gives us.

I share my life experience so that it can be used to help others consider looking into their lives and perhaps Steal Away, and escape the Democratic party stronghold that wants to control our lives. We were not created to be bound. We were created to be free, and our Founders wanted us to experience freedom as citizens of the United States of America. Don't allow anyone to take it away. It's your time to release the chains and Walkaway.

When I grew up, I was told by everyone around me that I was to be a proud Democrat. After all they were the Party that would take care of Blacks. I was coached from birth that the Democratic Party was the only party that provided for and did anything for Blacks, so in return I should be loyal to them. We were taught that Republicans were evil, mean and racist.

Day after day, week after week, month after month, and year after year this was pounded into my head by family and friends. I even heard it continually at church. I was even told that when I became eligible to vote, that I had better vote Democratic or not come home because I lived in a Democratic house. My mother worked for the Party.

Every four years my mother sat us down in front of the TV to watch the Democratic Party Convention. All of it! We were indoctrinated and taught that it was the party of choice.

The American is not related in any way, to any political party. The editor is not a member of any political party. We seek only the truth, regardless of who it helps – or hurts. You can reach us at newsletter@AmericanEndeavorInc.com

A little humor

Science, Politics and Covid: Will Truth Prevail?

The specter of Dr Fauci, who has been wrong on literally every call he has made (sometimes on purpose) conjures a society in which experts create fake catastrophes merely to enhance their income and status.

We were not allowed to ask questions or refute anything about the Party or its platform. Even though we were never told what that platform was! Most adults really had no idea either, they just followed the party because they were told to do so by community leaders, family, and friends. To stray off of the plantation put you at risk of exclusion.

I had questions and I needed answers. So, I began to speak up at an early age. I questioned why Blacks were so loyal to a party that violated everything that we were taught as moral and Christian values. Most Blacks are very Conservative. It just didn't make sense to me. It was confusing to say the least.

My mother taught us Conservative values along with sound Biblical Doctrine. However, what she taught us was in direct opposition to the principles of the Democratic party platform. I'm not even sure if she realized that. She held to a 'party first' principle.

As a child I was taken to church almost every day of the week, and it wasn't an hour-long service either! They had church till the cows came home. When I questioned the preachers about why they were Democrats, they always told me that they should never give people too much knowledge because if they did, they wouldn't be needed any longer. They said that it was necessary to keep people in darkness so that they would always be respected and be able to maintain a position as a community leader. We would sit in church for hours upon hours as we heard the Word of God delivered to us with a mixture of politics in a very biased way. It didn't make sense to me, because it was like trying to drive a square peg into a round hole.

As you can imagine I got into a whole lot of trouble questioning authority, at home and abroad. To make a long story short, I ended up with a pretty sore behind, and a lot of hurt feelings, as well as a lot of time spent in isolation. I learned the meaning of the phrase "a hard head makes for a soft behind."

I was a target of verbal and physical discipline at home, at church, and in the neighborhood. I was called a heretic, a traitor, and was told to keep quiet. Many of the church leaders told me that I had the "Letter of the Law" but "no Spirit".

I eventually had to leave home and my congregation, to search for the truth. I enlisted in the military, but things were not any better there, because the Blacks that I encountered were of the same mindset, and were also blind followers of the Democratic Party. I sat down for hours with many of them discussing why they thought that I should be a good Democrat and keep quiet. They never listened to my point of view because they told me that it was coming from a "white man's" perspective, and that I was not black enough.

I was labeled an Uncle Tom, Mr. Goody Two-Shoes, a White man in a Black body; and I was targeted for ridicule. I was even told that they're going to kill me if I did not conform and remember where it was that I came from.

“We know what we are, but not what we may be.”

William Shakespeare

After four years I returned home. Things hadn't changed. Friends and relatives were still Democratic zombies. They continued to harass me. I continued to be a thorn in the side of the church leaders in town, and became the target of rebukes from the pulpit, with no opportunity to refute them. I spent a lot of time in my youth trying to reconcile this affection for their blind allegiance to the Democratic Party. I have never gotten any satisfactory answers, just ridicule, and rebuke.

I finally decided to walk away from it all and become a free thinker. It was the best thing that I have ever done in my life. A heavy load was lifted away. I thank an older fellow co-worker for helping me see the light. I have since learned about Freedom and Liberty, and have become engaged in efforts to help others leave the Democratic Plantation by informing them of the truth that can easily be found if you are willing to search for it. It hasn't been easy.

I've spread Conservative principles and the truth about the American Dream ever since. Some listen, but many refuse to hear the message. Most of those that do agree will not openly declare it for fear of retribution. They want to be accepted.

It's been a tough fight, and an uphill journey, but I'll never turn back. The truth will make you free. Even after suffering the loss of family and friends I will continue to choose Conservative ideas over Progressive lies.

Much of what happens to Blacks regarding the implanting of their world view takes place early on in life. It's implanted deep in their hearts, and it's tough to root it out of them. It takes place in the home, at Church, and in the community. Most of it is forced upon us by peer pressure. It is a result of tribalism and identity politics. Sadly, much of what is taught is based on bad history and hate, not on facts.

For most of our lives Blacks are taught to be loyal to each other, even with your vote. Unity is based on skin color, not on truth; whether it be Biblical or political. What a travesty!

It's past time to make a change. Many are coming around, and hearts are changing, but we have a long way to go. Blacks are being destroyed by ignorance and poor leadership. Our nation's future is at stake. Thank God for the many Black Conservatives that are spreading the truth, it's a breath of fresh air for our communities.

Thank God I became a thinker way back in the eighties. Will you Walk Away and do the same today?
